One Negro Kills Another,

About 1 o'clock yesterday, a quarrel arising from a trivial cause resulted in the death of Francis Wyckoff, a colored man. The facts are as follows:-

At the corner of Doak street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth, in Shippen street, James Derny keeps a barber shop, and had in his employ Francis Wyckoff, Henry Carr, and The proprietor having Israel Licketts. ordered his looking-glasses, they were brought to his shop yesterday, and in his absence Carr got possession of one of them, under the pretense of showing it to his employer's wife, and went out with it. When he returned he had some money, but not the glass, and after some words the glasses were paid for by Mr. Derny, who went out with the man that brought them. Wyckoff then accused Carr of having pawned the glass, and said if he was proprietor he would discharge Carr at once. Angry words ensued, and finally Carr called Wyckoff a —, and said he was no man if he did not take it up, and pulling off his coat, said he could whip him. They were about entering upon a fight, when Israel Licketts seized them both and kept them apart. While struggling with him Carr took what is known as a "Barlow knife from his pecket, and with a back-handed throw sent it into the breast of Wyckoff, the point of the blade piercing his heart. was then conveyed to a drug store in the vicinity, where he died in fifteen minutes. The deceased was married, but had no family.

Henry Carr, who iled immediately after committing the deed, is a light mulatto, and had light brown eyes, a lump on his left temple, two or three teeth gone from the upper law, short hair, small goatee, a crucifix on one arm, and is left-handed. He was dressed in a black striped shirt, black alpaca coat, yellow pants, black cap, and Congress gaiters worn out at the sides. He is about 24 or 26 years of age, five feet seven inches in height. and weighs about 150 pounds. His tips are slightly compressed, and his nose is more aquiline than is usual with his race.

The Voting in Memphis-A Majority for Senter. MEMPHIS, Aug. 5.—The election passed off with unusual quiet, the saloons being closed and business generally suspended.

Some official reports place Senter's majority in this county at 3000, and the majority for the Democratic candidate for the Legislature is larger.

Germantown gives Senter 213 and Stokes Jackson gives Senter 350 majority in a vote of 1270. The returns are coming in slowly.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 5.—The election here passed off quietly, and there was no disturb-ance of any kind. The business houses were generally closed so as to give those employed an opportunity to work at the polls. The vote was the largest ever given, but the returns are not yet in. The vote is closed. There will probably be 100 majority in this city for Senter. The country districts go almost unanimously for Senter, and will swell his majority to 1500. Partial returns from other counties are as follows:-

Washington county-Senter, 200 majority. Bradley county-Stokes, 70 majority. Gibson county, Humboldt Precinct-Senter, 00 majority. Maury county, Spring Hill Precinct-Senter, laa majority.

Obin county, Union City Precinct-Senter, 55 majority. Hamilton, Chattanooga county-20 to 1 for Senter. Coffee, Tullahoma county-Senter, 149 majority.

Shelbyville, Bedford county-Stokes, 192 majority. Weakley county-Senter's majority in three districts, 611. His majority in the whole county will be 2000. Giles county-Senter's majority, 1500. D. C. Slaughter, Emerson Etheridge, Edmund Cooper, and Bailie Peyton are all elected to the State Senate from their respective districts. NASHVILLE, Aug. 5.—The full vote of Nashville is as follows:-Senter, 1272; Stokes, 1280. In the county, eight districts give Senter 1143 and Stokes 41. The remaining districts will increase Senter's majority to 1200. The conservative ticket is elected to the Legislature. Bedford (ten districts), Senter, 843 majority, and it will be 1000 in the whole county. The conservative legislative ticket is elected. Madison county-Senter's majority, 2000, Most of the negroes voted the conservative ticket, which is elected. Knox county-Senter's majority in Knoxville is 300, and in the county 800, Williamson county-Senter's majority, 2500. Gibson, two precincts, Senter's majority, 981. The county will give him from 3500 to 4000 majority. Sullivan county (seven districts), Senter, 1069, Stokes, 131; Robinson county, Senter's majority, 2000: Haywood county, Senter's majority, 2000; Sunner county, Senter's majority, 2300. Henry county, Senter's majority, 300: Humphrey county, Senter's majority (two precincis), 273; McMann county, Senter's majority, 100; Hampton county (ten precincts to hear from), Senter's majority, 277; Marion county, Shellmound, Senter, 105; Stokes, none.

The returns show that Senter has carried Middle and Western Tennessee by sweeping majorities, and making allowances for Stokes probable majority in East Tennessee, has carried the State by 25,000 to 30,000 majority. The conservative ticket for the Legislature has been elected in all the districts carried by Senter, and it is probable that the conservatives will have a majority in both branches. Memphis, Aug. 5. - Madison county, Jackson precinct gives Stokes 422 and Senter 795. D. H. King, conservative, is elected to the egislature.

Trenton-Senter, 676; Stokes, 83. Gibson will give Senter 409 and Stokes 65. Further returns from Hardman county indicate that Senter's majority will be 1600.

Memphis, Aug. 5.—Special despatches to the Avalanche give us the following returns: Hardman county-Senter's majority, 1000; Carroll county (three districts), Senter, 569 majority; Milan county, Senter, 34 majority Tivesant (?) three precincts, Senter, 426 majority; Jackson, Madison county, will give Senter 2000 majority; Trenton, Senter, 591 majority: Union City (official), Senter, 505; Stokes, 28; Etheridge, 503; Anderson, 25.

Its Bistory, Climate, and People.

Under the above caption Appleton's Journal gives the first of a series of sketches relating to Cuba. We make two or three extracts:-

THE SIZE OF CUBA. The island of Cuba in size is nearly equal to England proper (without the principality of Wales), being seven hundred and eighty miles in length, and about fifty-two miles in medial breath, containing a superficial area of forty-three thousand five hundred square miles, being nearly equal in extent to all the other West India Islands united. Columbus supposed Cuba (at the time he visited the Isle of Pines, associated with Cuba) to be a continent, and it was so regarded until circumnavigated by Ocampo, in the year 1508.

In the early times of the settlement of the West India Islands, San Domingo was the most known, and received the largest share of attention. Cuba attracted but little notice in Europe, until Cortez made it a base of operations in his contemplated and consummated attack on Mexico. It will be perceived its first appreciation was for its military command of the surrounding coasts. Subsequently, in necessary imitation of Cortez, the rince de Joinville concentrated his fleet at Havana, preparatory to his attack on Vera Cruz, and to Havana he returned after capturing San Juan de Ulloa. ITS MILITARY POSITION.

Its importance as the "key to the Gulf," will be still more perfectly understood when we recollect that Cuba is ninety-five miles from the nearest point of Jamaica; fifty miles from Hayti; one hundred and twenty miles from the coast of Tobasco and Yucatan, in Mexico; and one hundred and fifty miles from the coast of Florida.

JEFFERSON'S OPINION OF CUBA. The importance of Cuba does not therefore arise solely from its great productive wealth, To resided in Madison avenue, back of St. | nor from the demand its inhabitants make | hot evening, and Count d'Orsay laughingly upon the productions of other peoples, but it is largely founded upon its admirable position in commanding the entrance to the Mexican Gulf, Havana being situated exactly where the carriers of commercial enterprises must cross each other's paths in their intercourse with Mexico and the Southern United States. It is a wonderful instance of the sugacity and statesmanship of Thomas Jefferson that he bould have written nearly fifty years ago:—

"I candidly confess that I have ever looked upon Cuba as the most interesting addition that can be made to our system of States, the possession of which (with Florida Point) would give us control over the Gulf of Mexico and the countries and isthmus bordering it, and would fill up the measure of our political well-being.

TROPICAL MIDNIGHT, The atmosphere of Cuba, as everywhere within the tropics, is so unpolluted, so thin, so elastic, so serene, and, save by experience, so inconceivably transparent, that every star and planet in the heavens seemed to be boldly defined; you can see around and behind them; they actually stand out in the clear blue, while the heavenly constellations are more brilliant than in the temperate latitudes. In this night-watch we saw the northstar and the great polar bear skirting along the hori-And there were constellations unknown to Northern skies, with the myriads of stars forming the milky-way, making not a dim, just-perceived light, but absolutely flaming through eternal space.

THE VAIN PURSUIT OF HEALTH. We have sad reminiscences of the truthfulness of the following sketch, treating of people who inconsiderately rush into foreign climes to recuperate an already destroyed constitu-

Here it is perhaps necessary to say that the saddest chapters of suffering that could be written would be the histories of confirmed invalids coming from the Northern States, seeking health in "the balmy air of these tropical climes." Accustomed to the careful ousekeeping and domestic arrangements of their northern home, and sustained by an invigorating climate, they find themselves suddenly in Havana, deprived of even a comfortable retiring room, and without the necessary convenience of even a bed to lie upon. Every lish, except otherwise ordered, is reeking with red pepper, onions, or garlie; the language and habits of the common people are strange and repulsive; and, meantime, the climate, enervating and exhausting to the most vigorous constitutions, completes the disaster; and the poor, disappointed seeker of health learns, when it is too late, the sad mistake that has been made by the consumptive searching a warm latitude for health. We saw one of these wretched people hoisted by the aid of a mattress upon the deck of our departing steamer. There was apparent death in the eye and in the emaiated frame. It was a desperate effort to reach home and die among friends and kindred. Presently the steamer moved out of the harbor, that was literally as hot as an oven. The cool sea-breeze fanned the brow of the sinking one; the pure fresh air acted as an elixir; the eye brightened, the voice returned, the hand had the power to give an affectionate return for the friendly grasp. The cool night air set in, and the invalid, like one escaping from an exhausted receiver. wept and signed over the suffering endured n the sad climate and surroundings for invalids common to all Cuban resorts.

Reminiscences of Walter Savage

BY CHARLES DICKENS. The last number of All the Year Round contains a most interesting paper on Forster's "Life of Walter Savage Landor," evidently from the pen of Charles Dickens, the friend of both the subject and the author of the biography. Landor, it is well known, was the original of Lawrence Boythorn in "Bleak House." We select from the article the following graceful and characteristic

The impression was strong upon the preent writer's mind, as on Mr. Forster's, during years of close friendship with the subject of this biography, that his animosities were chiefly referable to the singular inability in him to dissociate other people's ways of thinking from his own. He had, to the last, a ludicrous grievance (both Mr. Forster and the writer have often amused themselves with it) against a good-natured nobleman, doubtless perfectly unconscious of having ever given him offense. The offense was that, on the occasion of some dinner party in another nobleman's house, many years before, this innocent lord (then a commoner) had passed in to dinner, through some door, before him, as he himself was about to pass in through that same door with a lady on his arm. Now, Landor was a gentleman of most scrupulous politeness, and in his carriage of himself wards ladies there was a certain mixture of stateliness and deference belonging to quite another time, and, as Mr. Pepys would observe, "Mighty pretty to see." If he could by any effort imagine himself committing such a high crime and misdemeanor as that in question, he could only imagine himself as loing it of a set purpose, under the sting of some vast injury, to inflict a great affront. A deliberately designed affront on the part of another man it therefore remained to the end of his days. The manner in which, as time went on, he permeated the unfortunate lord's encestry with this offense, was whimsically characteristic of Landor. The writer remembers very well when only the individual himself was held responsible in the story for the breach of good breeding; but in another ten years or so it began to appear that his father had always been remarkable for ill manners, and in yet another ten years or so his grandfather developed into quite a prodigy of coarse behavior.

Mr. Boythorn-if he may again be quoted -said of his adversary, Sir Leicester Dedlock:-"That fellow is, and his father was, and his grandfather was, the most stiff-necked, arrogant, imbecile, pig-headed numb-skull ever, by some inexplicable mistake of Nature, born in any station of life but a walking-stick's!

The strength of some of Mr. Landor's most captivating kind qualities was traceable to the same source. Knowing how keenly he him-self would feel the being at any small social disadvantage, or the being unconsciously placed in any ridiculous light, he was wonderfully considerate of shy people, or of such as might be below the level of his usual conversation, or otherwise out of their element, The writer once observed him in the keenest distress of mind in behalf of a modest young stranger who came into a drawing-room with a glove on his head. An expressive commentary on this sympathetic condition, and on the delicacy with which he advanced to the young stranger's rescue, was aftewards furnished by himself at a friendly dinner at Gore House, when it was the most delightful of houses. His dress—say, his cravat or shirt-collar—had become slightly disarranged on a called his attention to the circumstance as we rose from table. Landor became flushed, and greatly agitated: "My dear Count d'Orsay, thank you! My dear Count d'Orsay, J thank you from my soul for pointing out to me the abominable condition to which I am reduced! If I had entered the drawing-room, and presented myself before Lady Blessington in so absurd a light. I would have instantly gone home, put a pistol to my head, and blown my brains out!

Mr. Forster tells a similar story of his keeping a company waiting dinner, through losing his way, and of his seeing no remedy for that breach of politeness but cutting his throat, or drowning himself, unless a countryman whom he met could direct him by a short road to the house where the party were assembled. Surely these are expressive notes on the gravity and reality of his explosive inclination to kill kings!

His manner towards boys was charming and the earnestness of his wish to be on equa terms with them and to win their confidence was quite touching. Few, reading Mr. Fors ter's book, can fail to see in this his pensive remembrance of that "studious wilful boy, at once shy and impetuous," who had not many intimacies at Rugby, but who was "generally popular and respected, and used his influence often to save the younger boys from undue harshness or violence. The impulsive yearnings of his passionate heart towards his own boy, on their meeting at Bath, after years of separation, likewise ourn through this phase of his character.

But a more spiritual, softened, and unself ish aspect of it was to be derived from his respectful belief in happiness which he himself had missed. His marriage had not been a felicitions one-it may be fairly assumed for either side-but no trace of bitterness or distrust concerning other marriages was in his mind. He was never more serene than in the midst of a domestic circle, and was invariably remarkable for a perfectly benignant interest in young couples and young lovers, That, in his ever-fresh fancy, he conceived in this association innumerable histories of himself, involving far more unlikely events that never happened than Isaac d'Israeli ever imagined, is hardly to be doubted; but as to this part of his real history he was mute, or revealed his nobleness in an impulse to be generously just. We verge on delicate ground, but a slight remembrance rises in the writer which can grate nowhere. Mr. Forster relates how a certain friend, being in Florence, sent him a leaf from the garden of his old house at Fiesole. That friend had first asked him what he should send him home, and he had stipulated for this giftfound by Mr. Forster among his papers after nis death. The friend, on coming back to England, related to Landor that he had been much embarrassed, on going in search of the leaf, by his driver's suddenly stopping his borses in a narrow lane, and presenting him the friend) to "La Signora Landora." The lady was walking alone on a bright Italian winter lay; and the man, having been told to drive to the Villa Landor, inferred that he must be conveying a guest or visitor. "I pulled off my hat," said the friend, "apologized for the coachman's mistake, and drove on. The ladv was walking with a rapid and firm step, had bright eyes, a fine fresh color, and looked animated and agreeable." Landor checked off each clause of the description, with a stately and of more than ready assent, and replied, with all his tremendous energy concentrated into the sentence:-"And the Lord forbid that I should do otherwise than declare that she always was agreeable—to every one but
